Government. And Follows by purposed. Henceforth she will co-operate less ambitiously and more happily with the other great divisions of the republic.

But it is now probable that the mighty West will develop a sectionalism more and more intense. If there is any danger of dis integration it may be looked for in that course.

A Sensible South.

The South has not asked for the return of her captured battle flags. Let that fact be remembered lastingly to her credit. If the legislatures of her several States had appealed to Congress or the President for the performance of that act of courtesy, their petitions might have been construed and criticised as a desire to perpetuate the rankling memories of defeat. This view of the case might have been unjust, but would surely have been entertained by the Grand Army of the Republic. Our large exchange list includes all the principal Southern papers. We can certify that not one of these has suggested the issuing of that order for the restoration of battle flags, which has been so promptly and wisely followed by its cancellation. The meteorite which was re-DOOR and WINDOW FRAMES, MOLDINGS, &c. ported to have fallen in a Western State some days ago did not cause more astonishment among the farmers of the vicinage than the promulgation of this order among those Southerners who are living wholly in the present and trying very hard to forget the past. They are too much preoccupied with their promising crops, their mine openings, their new foundries and factories, their real estate speculations, to take any interest in sentimental questions. They have as little time for sentiment as for sectionalism. Business is the consuming pasion of the South just now. She leaves the North to excite herself over the disposition of relics of a bygone age, while she concen-trates all her own interest and energies on oractical and living issues.

We cannot state this fact too emphatically, for the tone of some of our Northern contemporaries shows that they do not yet appreciate the peaceful, passive and contented feelings of the South in relation to union and brotherhood. They have seized upon this "battle flag incident." as the sensation of an hour is called for want of a better name, to say things about the South which were perhaps true enough at the close of the civil war, and before time had egun to do its healing work, but which are wholly inapplicable now.

That man must be unwilling to look truth in the face who cannot see that the South is to-day as truly a part of the Union, one and inseparable, not only geographically and politically, but in the hearts and minds of her people, as the North or the West. If an intelligent, impartial judge should carefully study the tendencies of sections, as exhibited by many signs and tokens since 1870, he would look for the next movement of dissatisfaction and revolt to the West and not to the South. One thing is certain. The South will not again, in our day, attempt to shape the policy of the Federal Government. The period of her ascendancy is passed. Henceforth she will co-operate less ambitiously and more happily with the other root, divisions of the routh.

integration it may be looked for in that quarter. It seems to be now only a question of time when the Western States will have working majorities in both houses of Congress. New States are being rapidly carved out of Western territories, and before many years they will equal, if they do not outnumber, the States which may properly be classified as Northern and Southern. It may be expected that these Western States, at no distant time, will be able to choose a majority of the Electoral College. From that day forth, if united, they will own or control Presidents as well as Congresses. We do not speak of these indications in the spirit of an alarmist. No man of sense will take fright or borrow trouble from a possibility now so far removed as the tri-JUST FROM THE FACTORY—10 dozen of the IMPROVED PATENT-STAY A.B.S. SHIETS, the best goods ever offered in Alexandria for the price. Will outwear any $1 Shirt.
